The house is of frame construction, two stories high, five bays wide by two deep, and faces east. Siding is asbestos shingle. The steep hipped roof is covered in patterned metal and contains a central hipped dormer with two six-pane windows. A pair of corbeled interior chimneys rise from the hips of the roof.

All windows are 4/4. The entrance has a paneled surround with a simple three-pane transom and sidelights. A half-hipped porch with turned posts and balusters and scrolled brackets spans the facade; a similar porch at the rear has been enclosed with screening.

There are several outbuildings which appear to be contemporaneous with the house.
